What's new:

is a special goal incubator that exposes infants to the electric energy of the sun. With Neon, we hope to give newborns..." The "betterment" of the human species might sound like mumbo jumbo to most parents, but parents Aimee Thompson and Brian Turkiewicz found something special at their local dayscare centre when their little girl was born: the best patient in the world. When little Ava was born, Aimee and Brian told the dayscare centre staff they wanted to know everything the centre knew about giving newborn babies Vitamin D. Aimee explains: "Some newborns are not given enough Vitamin D and they don't have enough of the enzyme that allows them to absorb Vitamin D from the sunlight. For this reason, they could have rickets." Courtesy of Aimee and Brian Turkiewicz Little Ava was bounced from dialysis treatment (Aimee had her tubes put in at seven weeks old) to hospital to falls unit to pulmonary buddies to the neonatal unit before settling on the paediatric dietetics unit and special needs (SPND) child care area at their local meningococcal meningitis vaccine clinic. She was born 17 weeks prematurely and weighed just over a pound. It was during one of these visits to SPND that Brian first noticed something strange: the SPND staff recommended the baby be exposed to sunlight every day. "I didn't know what to make of it at first, I mean, how hard is it to go in the sun?" Aimee told us. "Then I remembered my background in nurse education—I was watching the Centre for Disease Control's "America Speaks About Sun Safety" video, and we watched the parents after the babies were born doing their Erythema Nodosum Leukocytoclasticum (ENL) protocol, exposing their babies to sunlight and covering their skin for six months. So we thought: that's what we're going to do." Little Ava was exposed to the sunshine every day while she was in SPND. She seems to have been born with an in-born ability to absorb Vitamin D, as she is one of the smallest babies in the World with an 8-9 week old who goes outside in the sun without sunscreen. These NHS experts and their colleague Jane Stewart were the first to warn us of the potential dangers of
