Is your subject looking at the camera? Photographs can be challenging because they consist of two dimensions (whereas a video image can be presented in only one dimension, a limited two-dimensional space). Another reason a portrait, from a professional's point of view, is difficult is that the photographer can't see what the subject is doing (or not doing) behind a surface, in this case, the skin. This is the essence of portraiture: You as the photographer are capturing a person, within the confines of a single plane, on a two-dimensional plane. Your only clue of what the person is doing is what they look like in the eyes. When you're looking at an image, you have no clue what is behind the skin; you see only skin. You can't see the subject's eyes or the subject's mouth. If the subject is looking off to the side, he may not be looking at the camera at all. This is a difficulty in portraiture, and you can't change it. So, if someone is posed in an unnatural way for a photo, it will look unnatural. The way to solve this problem is to use good lighting and pose your subject in the best way possible.

Children's Museum (Charleston) The Children's Museum is located in Charleston, South Carolina and has four locations in the Charleston area. Location William K. Rose Children's Museum of Art The museum is located in the historic 1874 French Empire residence on the Ashley River, originally built by Thomas Young Ravenel in 1896. Completed in 1912, it features a wide assortment of works by French, American, and South African contemporary masters, including a collection of African folk art and a vibrant collection of American Indian and European art. J. P. Williams Children's Museum Located at 342 King Street, the J. P. Williams Children's Museum incorporates science and technology into interactive programs and exhibits. Infants to Preschool Museum The Infants to Preschool Museum (located on a high-traffic corner in the heart of downtown Charleston) is the only museum in the state focused entirely on caring for and nurturing infants and toddlers. The mission of the Infants to Preschool Museum is to develop and encourage a love of young children and to instill the knowledge that children are different and must be treated as such. Oberholtzer Children's Museum The Oberholtzer Children's Museum is based in a red brick Victorian house on Meeting Street in North Charleston with original pieces such as leaded glass windows and beautiful woodwork. The museum features rotating themed exhibits, art and creative play throughout the entire house. Mission and history Children's Museum of the Lowcountry The mission of the Children's Museum of the Lowcountry (formerly the Charleston Children's Museum) is to promote creativity, improve the quality of the lives of children and their families, and inspire children to explore the world with love. Women's Hospital (Charleston) The Women's Hospital of Charleston was founded in 1912 by Elma Lewis and named after her late husband, Senator Benjamin F. Lewis. The Charleston Museum (Charleston) The Charleston Museum, founded in 1886, is the oldest cultural institution in the nation's oldest city. It is the home of the Robert Smalls Museum, which specializes in the history of the South Carolina Sea Islands, and of the Sons of Confederate Veterans Museum, which tells the story of the Civil War through the Confederate soldiers' experiences. true false true true The organization said it had a $128 million cushion in its cash flow this year to cover a budget shortfall caused by the state's decline in cigarette taxes and other revenue sources. After the company reported a loss of $369.5 million in the third quarter of 2001, it wrote down $372.4 million in accounts receivable and inventory and added $50.6 million in pre-tax pension charges. The company said its fourth-quarter loss of $67.6 million will be the result of a $122.2 million write-off of goodwill and $29.1 million in other expenses. ADT on Tuesday said net revenues for the fourth quarter, ended March 31, totaled $342.8 million, down from $347.2 million during the same quarter in 2001. Light-induced changes in dopamine levels in the cat retina. Intravitreal injections of light (3--7.2 W/mm² at 355 nm) were administered to anesthetized adult cats, either 1 week prior to euthanasia or immediately following injections of either a dopamine receptor agonist (quinpirole) or antagonist (SCH 23390) to assess the regional distribution of these drugs. The presence of dopamine-related fluorescent compounds in the retina was detected by HPLC analysis of extracted retinal material. The abundance of these compounds was highest in the macular and peripheral retinal regions, with considerably lower concentrations in the intermediate and center retina. Both compounds represented approximately 10%
