A: You can't make a default in Kubuntu, only an extension in Firefox, therefore I suggest you to download uBlock Origin, add a custom rule and redirect all requests with the.com domain to your home server of choice. Also, you may download another extension such as the Bookmark and Search Whitelist extension and configure to reject all requests from that domain. You can also install a firewall such as ufw. In Ubuntu 16.04 you have to open your terminal and change the ownership of the mozilla directory, so the uid0 group. The group creation rule will apply also to extensions so you have to go into the extension directory that you installed your custom script in, remove the read/write permissions (000) and change ownership to the group. `sudo chown uid0:group. -R`

Also, you can make a rule in ufw and redirect all HTTP requests on port 80 to port 8080 on the same interface (adapter) so you may access the computer via port 8080. `ufw allow 8080/tcp` If you are not using iptables, you have to execute the first rule above. If you need to redirect only the domain, you can change the network adapter to eth0 and then make a rule that does the following: Redirect all requests on HTTP to port 8080 `sudo ip t nat to 8080` You have to change the adapter back to eth0.

Install ufw `sudo apt-get install ufw`
Note, you don't need `ufw-common` for this. Configure ufw `sudo ufw allow 8080/tcp` Restart the firewall and test the redirect. Q: Jetty 6.1.x using Eureka Filter to log internal errors I am trying to use Eureka Filter to log internal errors (by mapping exceptions to certain controller's path/method), but it is not working for me (says "Not Found"). Here is my Filter and RestController class:

RestController.java package
com.eu.rest.controllers; import java.io.IOException; import javax.s ervlet.http.HttpServletRequest;
import javax.servlet.http.HttpServl etResponse; import org.eurekastre ams.server.domain.PageInfo;
import
